database contains 3^ .Q: numpy array is not the same as memory address I am using a simple numpy array to store values in my main code, and I wrote a test to make sure they are getting assigned to the memory correctly. For example, this code will check to see if the arrays are the same. a = np.array([1,2,3]) b = np.array([1,2,3])

`print(a==b)` According to my outputs, this array `b` is not the same as the array `a`. I am not sure why this is happening. I ran the numpy array in several operations, and it always works fine. For example, I assign a value to the array `a`, then assign that value to array `b` without any issues, and print the two arrays to make sure the value in array `a` is still there. A: You are not checking whether two objects are equal. You are checking whether two arrays refer to the same data. What you should be doing is check the elements instead: `a = np.array([1, 2, 3]) b = np.array([1, 2, 3]) c = np.array([4, 5, 6]) print(a == b) # False print(a == c) # True # Or in one line` print(a == c) # True Spencer Seide
